

Ana Maria Mendez Libby was born in Costa Rica and is a self-proclaimed Central American national. She is currently the Oxfam Country Director in Guatemala. She is a lawyer who specializes on international law and human rights, and has a Masters in Social Psychology and Political Violence. She has contributed to the promotion of human rights with the Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), the Danish International Development Agency, UNDP and IBIS Denmark. Women's rights and the rights of Indigenous Peoples have always been her at the core of her personal priorities.